

POLITICS OF THE SHORTAGE.

A few weeks ago when it was announced that there was a shortage at the Mint the Republican papers of the State were delighted at the information, and proceeded at once to read the people of Nevada a lecture on the folly of placing silvermen in charge of public money.

The APPEAL made no defense of the charges on behalf of the present Administration, feeling that when a charge of theft was made against any party there can be no defense except the facts. Well after a while the facts came out and they proved that a Republican Administration created the shortage and the Silver Administration discovered it, and exposed it. How long the facts would have been covered had the Republican Administration continued in power, is a matter which cannot be profitably discussed. The Enterprise, whose assiduity shines with a conspicuousness of purpose, compared to which the glow of the great ten million candle power search light at the World's Fair, seems like a tallow dip, is now trying to convince the public that the editor of the APPEAL is in some mysterious way, shifting the responsibility of the shortage on the Republican Administration.

His idea of the matter is that the Silvermen really stole the bullion and just as they were about to be caught, the APPEAL man slipped in and so distorted the records and hypnotized the Government Inspectors and detectives that they concluded it was innocent Republicans, instead of guilty Silvermen who collared the swag. But the political proclivities of the thieves is a matter of comparatively small importance, as we have said before all parties have their dishonest members, and were the Enterprise edited by some of the broadguaged men who directed its editorial utterances in the old days, it would not have made the mistake of attaching any political significance to the Mint shortage.

Since however, it has attempted to do so, the APPEAL is willing to let the game go as the Enterprise has made it. In conclusion we advise the V. & T. R. R. Co., to cast its dragnet once more among the freak museums of San Francisco, and by paying a little more and trying the North side of Market Street for a change, secure an editor for the Enterprise, who will not make the once famous and respected journal a byword and reproach to the town in its declining years.

Squirring Bondsmen.

The bondsmen of Hontoon the late County Treasurer of Lyon are naturally enough trying to evade the payment of the bonds caused by the shortage.

When the Board of County Commissioners met there last week one of the bondsmen, down for a thousand dollars, declared that he only put his name on the bond for $250, etc., etc. People who go on bonds never expect to pay them.

Had these men taken the advice of the Lyon County Times they would have been much better off. The Times said openly that Hontoon was not a good man to trust with the people's money and urged the party not to nominate him. Of course this course raised a host of friends for Mr. Hontoon. He only had to cry, "newspaper persecution," and everyone who was down on the Times for speaking the truth about them, rushed to assure Hontoon that he was "all right" and he was elected. These people wanted to demonstrate that the Times man was a liar.

It is always well to keep it before the public that the editor of a local paper is the biggest liar in the county, then when he shows up your particular crookedness, he of course will not be credited. People who expect exposure ahead usually adopt this course. It makes them feel safer.

Well Hontoon proved just the man the Times had sized him up as being and his bondsmen, the men who thought the Times was maligning him for personal spite, will now have to settle for the full amount of their endorsements.

What a Chicago Man Says.

"If I advertise in your paper I will have to advertise in every other one," is a statement very often heard by solicitors. A Chicago publisher says that this is about as senseless an argument as could possibly be offered. He insists that a man should advertise in the paper that gives him the worth of his money.

The Silver State gets in this decidedly neat upper cut: If one half of the stories are true that are in circulation in regard to the mint at Carson under the last administration there is no question but that the Republican party of Nevada is in favor of the free coinage of both gold and silver and that each coin be interchangeable with the other.
